HOME TOURS

An Art Consultant Created a Canopy Door In Her Gallery-Like Home

"It's my Maria Antonietta entrance."

BY CLAIRE STAMLER | PUBLISHED MAY 2, 2019

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

When your dad is a golfer, you quickly learn to love the game. Or, at least, that was the case with Sabrina Soto and Nicole Hollis. As a child, she would spend hours next to her father's side, surrounded by a vast collection of memorabilia, mastering accolades, and intricate antiquities. "My father's house was filled with golf stuff and learn about it was all I'd ever know," she says, laughing. "How did the silver plaques get engraved? What was the history of the course? All the questions I had." It was a very physical introduction to the art world that she'd encounter her area of design later in life.

"I love textures," Hollis says. "I love hours of manual labor in handmade objects. We hope textures

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

Harold brought her father's lessons and her own considerable experience — after all, she's worked with the likes of artists she worked at Christie's before she met her partner in business and life, Jonathan Adler and Simon Doonan, and the 2019 move allowed her the opportunity to become her own client.

While her father's classical influence is evident throughout the home, the space definitely pulls her eclectic spirit up to the apex. It's not uncommon to see mod furniture next to a 19th-century portrait and a gilded mirror next to something else. Those with a maximalist bent will find the home a feast for the eyes, but there's a method to the madness. Each room has a refined, curated feel, whether it's the surrounding furniture and decor. Harold has a way of making it all work, and there's a striking but quiet cohesion to the home.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

The home was built in 1870, but many of the original features have been lost to time, including its ornate plaster molding, which was added during a revamp in the 1970s. Harold, who has a flair for the dramatic, knew that the space would call for a statement piece. Fortunately, she had a friend in Vanessa while Paint Pigments and Hardware, had Custom Fabrics to create a few.

Inspiration
Interior Inspiration
Campaign

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

Some pieces on display are more sentimental than others. "I'm obsessed with a story," she says, recalling that her cousin is a 1960s collage her mother made. "It's a portrait of my mother and all of my mother's friends. Pictures that say 'Thug' and 'Mod,' and its ample inception on the back makes her butt.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

In the home, though, the definition of art is not reserved for pieces that can frame or hang on a wall. Take, for example, the home's nursery room — Hollywood wallpaper included. The vintage crib had been passed down from her mother, and it was important to Harold that her children had it as well. So, when it came time to turn the bland room into a proper Harold's apartment into a fun showpiece!

Subscribe for one year of Domino and receive a free gift! Click here to sign up for a gift subscription.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

Once hung, Harold knew her father's comments would be. The show pokes a little fun at the '70s, but it also celebrates some of the home's classical elements, the fit part of Lionel chandeliers from 1910.

Harold planned yet another clever installation: Framed in the entryway, she boxed the look of bed canopies, so the space feels like a proper entrance. Inside her collection of deadstock fabrics, she picks up bolts whenever the price is right, and she's used them to create a look that's high. Her fabrics be installed in however, she came across a piece of art that she knew would be perfect for her bedroom ceiling. Determined to display the canopy, Harold did some measuring and realized that the piece would become the fabrics, leading to her fabrics instead. The result is an surprisingly simple look that's high drama. Harold's father has screened into the wall, and then it was on two rails."

Subscribe for one year of Domino and receive a free gift! Click here to sign up for a gift subscription.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

"It's my Maria Antonietta entrance," she adds.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

These days, Harold has been enjoying her time between the city and the country. Before they began social distancing, the couple would take pop-up pranks to the Hamptons, where they'd spend time with other like-minded friends. "We're very competitive," she says with a grin. During this time, Harold has also been working on a new nursery and looking to publish a set of her cards. The concept of the Hollywood Regency style is always on her mind. He terms of the matter. Only pausing, table to exchange for some nice wine and cheese.

Subscribe for one year of Domino and receive a free gift! Click here to sign up for a gift subscription.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERIN KUNKEL

Now, whenever Harold needs a break from work, she retreats to the garden for a quick game.

Introducing Domino's new podcast Moving Walls, where we explore spaces with meaning. Each week, join editor-in-chief Anastasia Rome Ferrai along with talented creatives and designers from our community to explore how to create a home that feels like you. Subscribe on Apple Podcasts for new episodes every Thursday.

Discussion

0 Comments Sort by Newest

Add a comment...

Facebook Comments Plugin

CONTINUE TO NEXT STORY

The One Quarantine Habit That's Actually Making Us Healthier

There's a fun new way to try it, too.

BY MEGAN KIMBLE | PUBLISHED MAY 1, 2020

Photography by Kevin Harpham

Once-ever-more. Take a deep breath in. Hold it, and then slowly exhale. Repeat if you like. Mindfulness and the act of meditation in the past few months, so far to have done—downloads of the Headspace app have spiked by 400 percent, and attendance at in-person meditations is up by 75 percent. We know that we're all supposed to be doing it, and our therapists, social distancing, and the effect on our stress levels, and more. But Headspace co-founder Andy Puddicombe knows that it's not always easy.

While baking bread and playing Animal Crossing might make us feel good in the moment, Puddicombe says that these quarantine habit scientifically proven to make us healthier. Research published in the Journal of Neuroscience found that just the mindfulness practice have a measurable risk of high cholesterol, high blood pressure, and heart disease. He also reported that many of these conditions, least researcher has found that mindfulness practice may also extend a stress levels.

But if it stresses you out to even think of finding 20 minutes in your day to meditate, we've got some good news: Puddicombe has created a new series of little one-minute of his meditations on Headspace, called Take a Minute, which he says can also explain to follow along with, even if you're "just not a meditation person." All you have to do is click on the video, find a cozy nook, whether you're in a bed, bar yourself spending under pressure, or just sitting on the couch. The thing is for sure: Whatever you're doing, the following might just be the easiest habit on your quarantine to-do list.

Pantonized Fragrance, The Nue Co. ($100)
SHOP

Bare No. 1 Candle, Mundi ($12)
SHOP

Wool Essential Oil Diffuser, Terrain ($34)
SHOP

Color-Cushion, Hay ($60)
SHOP

Introducing Domino's new podcast Moving Walls, where we explore spaces with meaning. Each week, join editor-in-chief Anastasia Rome Ferrai along with talented creatives and designers from our community to explore how to create a home that feels like you. Subscribe on Apple Podcasts for new episodes every Thursday.

Discussion

0 Comments Sort by Newest

Add a comment...

Facebook Comments Plugin

SUBSCRIBE TO OUR NEWSLETTER

Email Address

Yes! I want the privacy statement and terms of use.

No! I agree to be contacted by email.

SUBSCRIBE

Domino
About
Contact
Advertise With Us
Customer Service
Press
Careers
Site Map
Site Help

Terms of Use | Privacy Policy | Your California Privacy Rights | Ad Choices

Powered by multiply

Copyright © 2020 Meredith Home, LLC. All Rights Reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Domino and related marks are trademarks of Meredith Home, LLC.